New Course	BUS	88	Introduction to Cryptocurrency Investment		n/a	0599.00 - Other Business Management	In recent years, proliferation of trading apps such as Robinhood or the rush and rise of self-directed traders in the stock and digital currency markets resulted in many active traders/investors entering the market with little or no knowledge about trading, risk management and their own tolerance for loss. These new traders' wellbeing is therefore at risk both financially and more importantly emotionally, physically or mentally. In addition to personal risk, this can add social burden to both healthcare and financial industries. In summary, the result of poorly-educated new active traders is not only limited to individuals' financial-health risks but also constitutes social risks which increase its level of prioritizing and challenges from a public health/finance standpoint. Introduction to cryptocurrency investment course is creating a new skill-set and knowledge base for college students to get prepared for investment management industry and financial markets.			Approved at MCCC 01/27/22 conditional on some needed edits and typo corrections
New Course	BUS	229	Stock Market Investing		N/A	0599.00 - Other Business Management	The stock market has become known as a popular yet risky place to invest in. Many risks and opportunities are available for investors of all styles and kinds, and traders alike. Any novice stock market investor needs to develop a series of skillsets and a comprehensive understanding of the risk they are facing in the market. More than 80 million individuals are actively trading and investing in the stock market. On a self-directed fashion just in the USA. Yet there is a huge gap of financial and investment literacy amount Millennials and Gen Z.			Approved by MCCC 01/27/22 conditional on re-writing the course description and fixing some typos in the SPOs
